Innovation Series to feature citylink.ai and detail how digital cities of the future are coming together

CHANTILLY, VA, February 28, 2019 — On Thursday Citylink.ai announced an upcoming episode of Innovations with Ed Begley Jr. will showcase citylink.ai and its life.ai digital city platform dedicated to providing a turnkey hyper-localized economy that supports small business, education and the community in a sustainable way.

The digital city technology can be tailored for any master planned community or existing neighborhood. Initial projects include linking The Boro, The Meridian Group's $1 billion mixed-use development at Tysons; and Gramercy District, a $700 million mixed-use transit-oriented development on Ashburn Station by 22 Capital Partners.

"We are assembling the dream team to implement next-generation digital cities," said Minh Le, chief executive officer of citylink.ai. "Leading pioneers in master-planned communities like The Meridian Group are joining our ever-expanding team, including our digital city operating system by life.ai and our hospitality partner Blau and Associates, to deliver sustainable innovation in digital real estate development."

"Through collaboration and partnerships with the leading real estate technology providers like citylink.ai, we can be the thought leader in a citizen-centered, fully integrated urban experience," said Gary Block, Chief Investment Officer of The Meridian Group. "We are creating a roadmap for the digital cities of the future, and we'll highlight some of the best features on the Innovation Series."

"Citylink.ai is creating a sustainable and scalable model for digital city living and operations," said Brett Ferrigan, producer for the Innovations series. "As a series that is dedicated to making our world a better place, Innovations is proud to bring this information to its viewers."
